What is Green Coffee Bean?

The term "green coffee bean" refers to coffee beans before getting roasted. In this stage, coffee beans still contain their highly concentrated chlorogenic acid, most of which get totally destroyed during the heating process for the aromatically roasted coffee we usually drink.

What is Chlorogenic Acid?

Chlorogenic acid is a natural compound can be found in many plants. It is one of the major phenols found in green coffee bean extract. Chlorogenic acid is also known as an antioxidant and an important biosynthetic intermediate. Our Coffea Vida is made of unroasted coffee—extract of green coffee beans. Each Coffea Vida capsule contains approx. 100mg of chlorogenic acid.
